

CHRISTOPHER SCOTT

Christopher spent his whole career at the Bank of England, working on a range of subjects including finance, regulation, economics, and currency reserves.

On his retirement, he decided to take up woodturning. This soon led him to the Worshipful Company of Turners where he took an increasing role in the Company's craft activities. He joined the Court of the Company in 2016, chairing its Craft Committee for five years. He was elected Master in May 2024.

Apart from turning, Christopher is a keen allotment holder, a moderate skier, a narrowboat enthusiast, a community debt adviser, and he loves to dabble in computers. He is always keen to crack new IT problems and runs the website for the local church. In his younger days, he held a commission in the Royal Marines Reserve.

Christopher is married to Angela and they live in Kent. They have three grown up children and six grandchildren.
